Survey of the Month

What is your opinion about the prohibition of the use mobile phones in banks?

- Great initiative because it prevents the "exits from banks".
- The banks should increase their agencies' security.
- The measure is unconstitutional, because it restricts people's freedom.

Reflection

"With regard to performance, commitment, effort, dedication, there is no middle term. Or you do something well done or do not do at all".

*The Nucleo has news updated.
Know the new website!*

2012 is just beginning and Nucleo is "getting as good as it gets"! In constant search for improvement and development, the new website is already available with a new look and much more contents and interactivity.

Since the second half of last year, Nucleo has been working to redesign its site, keeping in mind a more intuitive browsing, with dynamic tools and clear and objective language.

The website was developed in WordPress format, a blogging platform, robust and to use. The posts (content published) are displayed on the main page in chronological order (the first article will be always the more up to date), allowing the visitor to read the posts in order of publication or by keywords using the search field.

The menu was designed thinking about the end user navigation, when passing the mouse on the main icons, the related captions for each topic appears. Besides knowing the list of services and Consulting Nucleo's products, the website offers to visitors, interested in the subject of security, several information fields: articles, videos, safety tips, links, library and research. Browse in this safety sea!

Movie Suggestion

Name: "Source Code"
Country: USA/France

Direction: Duncan Jones
Action and Fiction/93 min.

Year: 2011

Commented Synopsis: When Captain Colter Stevens (Jake Gyllenhaal) wake up in the body of an unknown man, he discovers that he is part of a mission to find the terrorist on a train from Chicago. On a different mission from any he has ever done, he discovers that He is part of an experiment created by the government called "Source Code", a program that allows him to take the identity of another man in his last 8 minutes of his life. With a second threat that can kill millions in the Center of Chicago, Colter relives the incident again and again, gathering clues each time, until he can solve the mystery of who is responsible for the bombs and how to prevent the next attack. "The film, though it is a science fiction, finds room to discuss values and decisions involving issues such as taking someone's identity and how far the state can go in order to rebuke the crime". Marcela Floriano
